Announcements

FOR STATE REPRESENTATIVE

We are authorized to announce GRANT HOLLIDAY
as a candidate for Representative from the 92d Legislative District, composed of the counties of Breathitt, Lee and Magoffin, subject to the action of the Republican party.

FOR ASSESSOR

We are authorized to announce John I. Strong as a candidate for ASSESSOR OF BREATHITT COUNTY subject to the action of the Republican party.

The Primary Election called for November 19th, has been called off, the so called Democratic committee by their arbitrary rulings making it impossible for the Democrats of this county to have any part or voice in choosing their nominees for the various county officers. We understand that the committee pretended to give certificates of nomination for the various county officers. It is our opinion that these certificates are null and void and ought not to be recognized by the democrats of Breathitt county, nor do we believe they will be.

We understand that democracy means that the people shall have a say in the matter of the selection of their officers but they have had no say in this matter. The committee failed to advertise the call for the primary according to law which requires that the committee shall give public notice of the calling of the primary election, by posting notices thereof on the Court house door and at least twenty public places in the county.
This was not done. No notice was posted on the court house door nor any other public place in the county. We understand that this same committee met behind closed doors here last Wednesday without any public notification to the candidates and proceeded to name officers for the primary, ignoring the various candidates' rights to submit lists from which the officers should be selected. If this is democracy we must confess that it is not of the standard brand.

We take the position that no nominations have been made and that no democrat is bound by any such proceedings. We believe that it is the duty of the democrats of this county to assemble themselves together and nominate Democratic candidates for the various county offices who will reflect the will of the majority and then elect them.

Let us have a free ballot and a fair count.

To The Democrats, OF Breathitt County.

When I announced as a candidate for county Judge I fully believed that I could win the race.
As the time approached for the primary conditions developed that led me to believe that in the interest of the Democratic party of Breathitt county and for the purpose of promoting harmony rather than destroying it, it was best for me to withdraw.

I am still a Democrat and do not wish to be thought as casting aspersions either on the members of the county committee or upon the election officers, because I would not like to question the integrity of either one of them; yet we are all aware that conditions may arise which, to preserve harmony in the party, might cause men to change their personal views.

I am very grateful to my friends for their assurances of support which they gave me, and assure them that it was only after the most careful consideration of all the conditions that I withdrew.

Respectfully,
S. S. TAUBEE.

TO THE Citizens of Breathitt County:

Having announced myself a candidate for the office of Superintendent of schools of this County, I feel that it is a duty that I owe to my friends, to tell them why I am no longer a candidate. I earnestly pushed the race till I plainly saw that I could not have a fair show in the primary. Then it was that I, together with other candidates decided to quit for the present.
I have no primary, and at the right time do what we think best for our County. Remember I am still a Democrat and as such do not wish to cast any reflection upon any upright citizen, but any fair minded person with common hog sense can see that the so called primary was so nearly a one sided affair that only a few had any show of a nomination. I am glad to say this much, that I finished as I commenced, with clean hands and pure purposes.

Thanking my friends for the encouragement they so kindly offered and trusting that I may yet serve them. I remain,

Yours very truly,
GREEN SHEPHERD.

To The DEMOCRATS And People OF Breathitt County:

You are hereby notified that I repudiate, denounce, and remonstrate against and refuse to take part or affiliate in what has been so shamefully, illegally, and dishonestly offered as a Democratic Primary to nominate candidates for the various county officers, for the following reasons and many others that I may not now recall or have space to enumerate.

Because the call was misleading in that it was not according to law, there being no notices posted at the Court house door, or any other public place in the county. It fixed November 19th, as the date of election and November 5th as the last day in which candidates could register and have their names placed on the ballots, the law requires the candidates to register at least fifteen days before the election which made November 4th as the last day instead of November 19th in which to register as the call indicated. The call required the candidates to register in the presence of Ed Callahan Chairman and J. M. Allen, Secretary. Said Callahan and Allen did not meet according to the call for the purpose of receiving the names of the candidates or the fees prescribed till November 5th 1904 and they did then refuse to receive or record the names of candidates for various offices for said Primary Election they tendering the sums of money required by said call.

I am reliably informed that Callahan could not be found by various candidates who sought to register before him from 6 o'clock p. m. of November 4th until after midnight to prevent opposition to some of the Hargis and Callahan Ticket. After midnight Mr. Callahan sent a messenger to Thomas Hudson informing him that his nomination was made sure. I jointly petitioned with several candidates and others who had sought registration the committee to set aside the call for November 19 1904 and call another according to law for some future date. This they refused to do after being shown the law, that made the call for the November 19th misleading, illegal and invalid.

My hopes for faint indications of fairness and justice had not all vanished until it came to the selection of election officers. The law, which was read and placed in the hands of the Committee, provides that each candidate shall present a list of names in each precinct to the committee and that the officers shall be selected from said lists for each precinct, and shall be as nearly equally divided as possible as to Judges, Clerks, and Sheriffs among the various candidates, but for fear I had selected honest, upright citizens that would do justice to all, I was given only one officer of my choice in almost every precinct, and him placed where he could be of the least service to me. This election means more than money or honor to some of the candidates that are seeking to be elected next November, and to Breathitt county it means all in all.

Friends I could have had my name enrolled among the honored few who claim to be the Democratic nominees by paying the price for recognition among the renowned and sacrificing myself and honor to the longevity of the Ring.

Your honor, privilege and freedom as American citizens, living under a blood bought banner are bought and sold by this corporation and trust like stocks on New York and Chicago Exchange. But the expressions that I gather from the good people of Breathitt county, leads me to believe that their Brokers will fall short in their deliveries for futures, in November 1905. I am informed that this corporation has a paid up capital of $3700.00, deposited with the Jackson Deposit Bank and made payable to the order of its chairman or president, and that said capital is to be increased by its stock holders as soon as danger seems apparently gathering round.
They also have some high cuts that they propose and have declared they will work through the State Board of Election Commissioners by having a Republican Democrat appointed as a Republican election officer for Breathitt county.

If in your honest, sober judgment you decide that I have been unwise, ungrateful, dishonest or disloyal by refusing to accept or recognize this fallacious scheme, turn your backs upon me and point me to the public with the finger of scorn. If, to the contrary, you decide that the ends will justify the means, help me to nominate and elect at the next November election in 1905, a full corps of county officers that will give to all an economical, honest and faithful administration of the county's affairs.
The manner in which the clique have attempted to use me in this ordel reminds me very much of the fable of the "Spider and the Fly"—except in this fly comes back again:

This is its moral:
Unto an evil counselor I'll close heart, ear and eye, And take a lesson from these facts that will serve me by and by.

before concluding allow me to say just here that I am still a candidate for Superintendent of Schools, subject to the will and action of my friends and the good people of Breathitt county at the November election, 1905, under whatever device they may advise.

Thanking you for your kind and earnest support, I am

Truly and obediently yours, HENRY B. NOBLE.

The Christmas Delineator.

The December DELINEATOR, with its message of good cheer and helpfulness will be welcomed in every home. The fashion pages are unusually attractive, illustrating and describing the very latest modes in a way to make their construction during the busy festive season a pleasure instead of a task, and the literary and pictorial features are of rare excellence. A selection of Love Songs from the Wagner Operas, rendered into English by Richard de Gall-ienne and beautifully illustrated in color by J. C. Leyendecker, occupies a prominent place, and a chapter in the Composers' Series, relating the Romance of Wagner and Cosima, is an interesting supplement to the lyrics. As very clever paper entitled "The Court Circles of the Republic" describes some unique phases of Washington social life from an unnamed contributor, who is said to write from the inner circles of society. There are also stories from the pens of F. Hopk-s Smith, Robert Grant, Alice Brown, Mary Stewart Cutting, and Elmore Elliot Peake and such interesting writers as Julia Magruder, L. Frank Baum, and Grace MacGowan Cook hold the attention of the children.

Many Christmas suggestions are given in Needlework and the Cookery pages are redolent of the Christmas feast. In addition, there are the regular denaments of the magazine, with many ap-ecial articles on topics relating to woman's interests within and without the home.

MOSES' MILL.

Down close to the fall Moses' water in li-stands
It was mostly all built by his own nimble hands, He had thought many times how to make it just right, Long even before he had purchased the site,
And had pondered it over many times in his mind,
And often thought just how it would grind
More than once had begun in a kind of a way, Then would leave off the work until it would decay.
He would cut down the trees and there they would lay, Until they would rot and moulder away.
But at last when his boys grew strong and could help,
The work at his mill he thought he'd renew.
"Now boys" Moses said I have in my mind, A mill that when built it surely will
grind,
And the first thing to do is put in the wheel, Then with some good rocks we can make some fine meal.
They went to their work with energy and vim,
They put it all up and made it in trim.
Then when all was done how happy Moses felt,
He only lacked one thing and that was a belt.
It soon was secured which gave peace to his mind,
And now he was ready for his neighbors to grind.
The people came in, each man with his sack,
And such meal that evening as they all took back, You may talk of your biscuits, your crackers or cakes, But give me the bread that Moses' mill makes.
It is good without soda or seasoning at all.
Long live Moses' mill down close to the fall.

California as Horse Raising State

I have not the least hesitation in claiming that were the whole world searched there might be found sections which closely approached California, a horse raising country, but none that surpasses it, in as much as there are parts of this State which are perfect in every particular, nothing in fact, being lacking for the production of the very highest type of horses.—Jo-

Turkey Talk.

The turkey, being a native American, was not known in the Old World prior to 1766, when the Mexican species—the only domesticated variety—was imported. Once arrived in Persia the scholars began analyzing the dialect and soon declared it to be a very good imitation of the Persian language, crude it is true, but still Persian in character. These scholars were, even so early in advance of Professor Garner of African fame who declared the monkey tribe to have a language of its very own. The Persians recognized a new dialect of the Persian and, without further delay, accepted the winged creatures as a branch of their family tree. Who speaks of any family tree but in mixed metaphors? Did any race of men ever grow on a tree? But the native Oococoo grew on trees, real family trees; as many as the branches would hold lined up, literally speaking at dusk, little birds in their first pinfeathers (or pin feathers,) intermingled and grandparents with much ado, until a tree looked an animated species, voicing its sentiments into the evening air. "Gobble, gobble, gobble!"—Elizabeth Grinnell, in Sunset Magazine for November.

A light bay horse, about 14 hands high, a star in his forehead, foretop crapped and a regular pacer. Was purchased in Wolfe county, by Babe Hill. A suitable reward will be paid to the finder by B. F. CAMPBELL, Viper, Ky.

The national election of last Tuesday was the greatest landslide in the history of the country, the Republicans gaining a sweeping victory, the magnitude of which was astounding to even the victors themselves. Roosevelt carried every doubtful State, and broke the ranks of the solid South, Missouri giving a Republican majority, not to mention Maryland, West Virginia, Indiana, New York, Illinois and every State heretofore considered doubtful, all having gone over overwhelmingly Republican. Pennsylvania leads as the banner Republican State with the astounding plurality of 485,000.

Local Democrats find a gleam of consolation in the old-time Democratic majority recorded in Breathitt county.

Sunset Magazine For November.

In the Sunset Magazine for November there is a vast amount of both instructive and interesting reading matter relating to the Pacific Coast from British Columbia to Lower California. Among such articles may be mentioned "An Undiscovered City" (Victoria, B. C.) by Herbert Guthrie, "Remo of the Silver State," by Clay Peters "Homes of Pasadena," by Bertha H. Smith, and "About Baja California," by O. C. Ellison. Sunset is steadily maintaining its standard as the great magazine of the West.

California. The Land of Resorts.

California is essentially a country with an all-the-year-round outing season. Its summer and winter resorts are limited only by its boundaries. Many of these are widely known and advertised, while others—and these not the least among the attractive—are known and loved only by a favored few.—Carrie Stevens, Walter in Sunset Magazine for November.

James Smith was shot and killed at his home, on Spring Fork about 25 miles from here, last Sunday night.

Alex Jackson and Robert Neely had been appointed special marshals to execute a peace warrant on Smith. While attempting to execute same, Smith was shot and instantly killed. He was about 70 yrs old and leaves a wife and five children. He had moved from Knott county about two years ago.

Jackson and Neely are now in custody, awaiting trial.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Christian Church will give their annual oat and ice cream supper, November 22nd, 1904. A novel and unique entertainment is promised in connection.

Mothers Praise It.

Mothers everywhere praise One Minute Cough Cure for the suffering it has relieved and the lives of their little ones it has saved. A certain cure for coughs, croup and whooping cough. A. L. CHAPTER XXXIII.

THE next morning George's mother returned to Darby and came directly from the station to his room. As she entered he stared at her in surprise, for she was dressed in black, even to her sunbonnet.

"Mother," he asked wonderingly, "what has happened?"

She did not answer for a moment, but sat down near his bed and folded her bonnet in her lap.

"When I heard how you hurt an' laid up," she said presently, "I was Mr. Hillier. You was a sight worse when I got to 'im, an' they didn't see no chance for 'im to live. He's dead, George; yore pore pa's dead an' buried. All his trouble is over. He's in God's charge now."

They were both silent for a moment, then Buckley said comfortingly: "Well, you must not grieve over it too much, mother. After all, it may be better as it is."

"That's so, George," she answered, "but my heart aches for 'im. He wasn't treated right, my boy. It turned out just like I thought it might. The doctors up there said his criminal acts all come from that old hurt in his head. After his death they had an examination. They found 'at a splinter of the skull had been workin' into his brain all them years since his fall off'n the wagon. It finally formed an abscess that killed 'im. Oh, the doctors raised a big fuss about it. They told me yore pa had been treated wuss'n a dog. They said what he done in violation of the law was caused by the hurt in his head an' that he'd never 'at touched a thing that wasn't his but for that, an' when I told 'em how honorable all yore pa's folks had always been away back as far as anybody could trace an' how hard you was strivin' to live the decent way, they all got together an' writ an' signed a paper—Mr. Hillier's got it—testifyin' under oath that yore pa wasn't naturally a dishonest man. They say, George—an' Mr. Hillier says he'll put it through right away—that they are a-goin' to let the legislature to exonerate yore pa."

"Judge Moore was in the warehouse as I come by, talkin' to Mr. Hillier, an' he come out an' tucked me by the hand, an' says he, 'Mrs. Buckley, me 'n' them twelve men made a awful mistake. An', says he, 'of a case like that had come up in a community where doctors an' lawyers was up to the latest notch in new discoveries a plea of insanity would 'at been made an' sustained. But,' says he, 'the twelve jurors will sign a paper with me, an' yore husband's name will be cleared.' Oh, George, it might nigh break my heart. I loved all them years that yore pa was just mean an' stubborn an' had old Nick in 'im, while the truth was he couldn't help hisself. It's good to be in all the newspapers tomorrow. Are you glad to hear it, George?"

"More than anything," was the reply in a low, husky tone.

"I hain't through yet," went on the old woman, wiping her eyes. "They all read Mr. Hillier's letter to me about how you refused the combination of the safe, preferrin' to die rather than give in because you wanted to show the world you was honest, an' how you was shot down an' layin' over'n betwixt this life an' the next, an' I never seed a set of men more anxious to be kind to a woman in affliction. They got the idea we was needy, an' started in to collect a lot of money. He's good 'em. I told 'em you wouldn't like that."

"No, I wouldn't," said George; "but I am glad they wanted to do it."

"When I got to yore pa he was too far gone to know me," went on Mrs. Buckley. "I just wish he had. I was so sorry for him when I seed how thin an' wasted he was, with the prints on his pore ankles when he come in."

George Buckley sat up more erectly. "It's the way God, Providence or whatever it is that rules over all has of managing matters," he said, his eyes flashing rebelliously, "and, for my part, I'm tired trying to do right. What's the use? Why should that poor man fall from his wagon while honestly endeavoring to earn a living for his family, and through that accident end his life in a prison? That's his fate, while such men as Telfair—"

It's told to 'er. She's led by them folks o' her'n to some extent, but below all that she's jest a good, strong, sufferin' woman."

George made no answer. They were both silent for several minutes, then Mrs. Buckley rose to leave. "I want to go out home," she said. "It will be sad, too, lookin' round the old place where he used to be. Now he's gone. I don't seem to remember anything but the good, sweet things he used to do an' say before his affliction. He's buried up there, George, but after he's vindicated, we'll bring him down here an' put 'im away where he belongs."

CHAPTER XXXIV.

THE next morning at breakfast, while Hillier sat sipping his coffee his wife stood near his chair.

"It's time I played my last card," she was saying. "I tell you that's some mistake. I don't believe Lydia Cranston would let that pore boy lie up stairs an' suffer without one word from her at such a time—a time when the whole town an' county is a-talkin' about his unkindness an' bravery an' the wrong done his daddy. That hain't like a woman one bit. Not one woman in ten thousand would stay quiet at such a time without some strong reason."

"Well, what are you goin' to do about it?" the merchant asked.

"Do? Why, I've got my case all in my head. As Mr. Telfair would 'at said, 'the wrong done is all in, an' it will have weight when I sum it up. I'm simply a-goin' to them weevil eaten aristo-crats an' have it out with 'em, one way or 't'her."

"You say you are?"

"Yes, I am. I know human nature, an' I'm not afraid to risk my judgment. I'm a-goin' to take that letter George wrote to you the night he was shot—oh, yes, I am; you needn't raise a kick about that. It is admitted as evidence, an' strong evidence at that. Then I'm a-goin' to tell 'em what me 'n' you have agreed on. That is my trump card. I'll knock out anything they hold, now you see of it don't. I'm goin' to give them a talkin' to that they won't forget soon, an' I'd do it right, too, fer I don't expect to tell anything but the truth. Ef Lydia Cranston has engaged 'erself to that stuck up bump on a rotten log, she'll have the satisfaction o' knowin' that that's one woman in the land that knows what she's drivin' ducks."

Hillier rose, with a smile. "Well, mylie you kin sorter bring 'em to 'er senses, an' I say go it. I lost control o' myself 't'her day an' give the old major a piece o' my mind, an' he thought as well git 't'her half from you. I wish you luck. Ef you fail, it will be about the first time you've missed fire since I've knowed you. I reckon it won't kill 'im. Mrs. Juggins says the New York doctor found 'im as sound as a dollar."

About 10 o'clock Mrs. Hillier went down to Cranston's. She was attired in her best black silk gown and flowered bonnet, and she walked with a firm, decided tread. She was invited by the maid servant to the door into the sitting room, where Cranston sat before an open window, looking out into the balmy spring sunshine. His wife was near him, and Lydia had just come in with a glass of claret punch and stood stirring it at his side. They all greeted her pleasantly, and Lydia seemed somewhat surprised at the unexpected visit, for it occurred to her quick powers of observation that while George Buckley lay ill at the Hilliers' and right upon the news of his father's death and public exoneration, a call from Mrs. Hillier was, to say the least, extraordinary. So Lydia's face became rigidly expectant as she seated herself and endeavored to participate cordially in the platitudes before her mother, with her usual tact, managed to set going.

"I was powerful glad to hear," said Mrs. Hillier to the major, "that the New York specialist made a favorable report on yore case."

"Yes; he took quite a load of worry off my mind, thank you, madam. The major always addressed ladies as 'madam' when he did not specially like 'em. It was a way he had of leaving the impression that he might or might not remember their names. In the same way he frequently greeted certain men whom he considered beneath him socially with a vague 'How do you do, sir?' However, his formality of speech today had little effect on the doctor. If he had called her by her given name, without a prefix, she would not have spoken what was on her mind any sooner."

"That's no use beatin' the devil around a bush, folks," she began lightly. "I've come here this mornin' to do my duty as I see it, an' I hain't a-goin' to waste time. The good book says do unto others as you'd have them do unto you, an' ef I was actin' as wrong as you are I'd want folks to tell me of it. I'd want 'em to telegraph if they couldn't git to me right away." The Cranstons were all staring fixedly. The warm color was rising in Lydia's face.

but it won't hurt you to git down to rock bottom facts. I believe yore tryin' to keep yore pore hearted daughter from doin' what she's right, an' to persuade 'er to do what she'll regret. Their hain't but one man on the topside o' God's green globe today that she ort to marry, an' that man is George Buckley. An' what have you got agin him now, I'd like to know? After seein' all that pitiful account in the papers of yore wrong done him, yore pore pa's shake that in the pore, wounded boy's face. You can't say he's a coward, as they say about the lordly governor o' this state. You can't say he's a bankrupt an' a spendthrift, like they say about Telfair. Nur you can't accuse George Buckley o' resortin' to low political tricks to advance his interests, an'—"

"Madam," the major broke in, raising his thin hand protestingly, "I must beg you—"

"Don't beg me, Major Cranston," hurried on the woman, her eyes flashing, her bosom heaving excitedly, as she leaned forward, her elbows on her knees. "I've come here to talk, an' I will be heard. I want Lydia to hear more than I do you, for I believe she'll act. She's been blinded, that gal has, or she's a unnatural woman, one or 't'her, fer no woman made on the right plan would let things go jest like they are agoin' an' never cheer a word agin it. Lydia Cranston," she turned to the staring, wondering girl, "did you hear about a certain letter George Buckley wrote my husband jest before he thought he was goin' to be shot by them robbers?"

"I heard he wrote something, some instructions to Mr. Hillier," replied the girl in an uneasy voice. "Something about what the men had demanded, but that's all father told me. I haven't been out of the house since we got back from Atlanta."

"Well, he tell you somethin'?" went on Mrs. Hillier. "That hain't a woman today in all America—an' I'm no exception—that knows, actin' as she does, she's loved enough by a man to be in his last thoughts when he's expectin' every second to meet a horrible death. I've got that letter in my hand. I don't intend to read it to you, but I won't fer it's too sacred. But I'll tell you that the pore boy was bothered by jest one thought in that awful moment, an' that was that the woman he loved an' wanted to care for was to be left to marry a worthless man. He begged Mr. Hillier to act for him, an' he begged George had 'at died that ad 'at been his message from the grave. I wonder if—"

Lydia Cranston had risen to her feet and stood bending toward the impassioned speaker, her great, beautiful eyes dimmed.

"Did he write that Mrs. Hillier?" she cried. "Oh, did he?"

"Not only that," replied Mrs. Hillier, "but he has laid that in my house ever since, pinin' fer a word, a message, a line from the woman he loved, but not a thing come. I got to lookin' fer it, too, fer I loved I'd made no mistake in savin' the woman up, an' 't'her day, when a big bunch o' roses come fer 'im with a note, I actually ran up to his room with 'em. I was so glad. I knowed what they growed, an' like a fool, I told 'im they were from the right source. His pore, pale face flushed all over. But when he opened the note it was from somebody else. His lip just sagged down an' he looked at me an' I was taken in the passion that had sent them. My Lord! I was hopin' mad then! Say, what are you usin', anyway, that you kin hold yourselves aloof from such a man at such a time? Even of you did intend to balk the marriage you could 'at treated 'im like a human being, stickin' in upbraidin' his honor an' protectin' the rights o' other people."

"That hain't but one man that she ort to marry."

"Mrs. Hillier," Lydia drew herself up to her full height, her startled eyes beaming down on the caller—"do you mean to say that George Buckley has not had a letter from me since he was wounded?"

"I certainly do, Miss Lydia."

Then the girl turned to Mrs. Cranston, taking a step toward her in her eagerness. "Mother," she said fiercely, "you took my letters away from Jane. I saw you talking to her."

"Why, daughter, I—"

NINK PERISHED

When the Reservoir Gave Way, Flooding a North Carolina Town.

Charlotte, N. C., Nov. 3.—The breaking of a reservoir of the municipal waterworks, located near the center of Winston-Salem, N. C., caused the loss of nine lives and the injury of four or five persons. The dam, known as the "Nink" dam, was built by the city of Winston-Salem, N. C., and was owned by the city. The dam was built in 1910 and was 100 feet high. It was built on a foundation of sand and gravel, and it was built without any reinforcement. The dam was built by the city of Winston-Salem, N. C., and was owned by the city. The dam was built in 1910 and was 100 feet high. It was built on a foundation of sand and gravel, and it was built without any reinforcement.

The cause of the disaster was the overflow of the reservoir, and a thorough investigation will be made in order to ascertain if the negligence of any of the employees at the pump station was responsible for it. The reservoir burst without warning, and the victims were drowned while asleep in their beds.

Father Killed in a Scuffle.
Detroit, Mich., Nov. 3.—Edward Howard, a patternmaker, was shot and killed by the elder man had his wife and daughter pinned to the floor by their throats. He had been drinking and had quarreled with Mrs. Howard because she would not give him more money. The shooting, it is claimed by the son and mother, was accidental. Mrs. Howard says her husband has been a heavy drinker for a number of years, and his habits caused them to leave their home in Manchester, England. Howard, Sr., lived but a few moments, the bullet having entered his loin. Young Howard is under arrest.

Claims of Political Managers.
New York, Nov. 3.—There was no extreme activity about political headquarters, but the managers were alert and watching the close of the campaign with great interest. The Democratic national committee issued a statement claiming with confidence the election of Judge Parker, and also making assertions about the campaign of the Republican party. Chairman Cortelyou, although shown a copy of the statement, would make no comment further than to repeat the claim made Saturday night that Mr. Roosevelt would have 314 votes in the electoral college. The Democrats claim 270 votes.

President Castro's Order.
Washington, Nov. 4.—Mr. Snyder, the United States charge at Bogota, cabled the state department that President Castro of Venezuela had issued an order again closing to navigation the river Zulia. This stream affords access to the interior of Colombia, and its closing before by President Castro almost involved Colombia and Venezuela in a war. The last action is taken to mean that the good understanding which was reached between Castro and Marroquin nearly a year ago, has not been preserved under the accession of General Reyes to the presidency of Colombia.

Crew Killed by Natives.
London, Nov. 4.—According to information from the island of Pemba, at the entrance to the Red sea, an investigation of Massira island made by the sultan of Muscat, shows that a boat's crew of 17 men, which left the British steamer "Baron Ingham," which ran ashore at the Kuria Kuria islands, reached Massira island and were massacred by the natives there. Nine of the murderers have been arrested. Previous information was that the boat had capsized and all its occupants drowned except one boy who was saved by the natives.

Town Gutted.
Macon, Ga., Nov. 3.—Tifton, Ga., suffered the most disastrous conflagration in the history of the city. The loss is estimated at approximately $250,000. There were no casualties. The burned district includes the following property: The Slack building, owned and occupied by S. G. Slack & Co., hardware; Dr. G. W. Julius, the second floor of which was occupied by the Green Manufacturing company; H. H. Heller lumber company, The Ensign Lumber company.

Ten Dropped to Death.
Wilkesbarre, Pa., Nov. 3.—Ten miners were crushed to death or drowned in the Auchincloss shaft of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western company mine at Nanticoke. The victims, with one exception, are said to be Poles and Slavs. The men had taken their position on the cage to be lowered into the shaft, the depth of which is 1,750 feet, when it is said the engine got beyond control of the engineer, the cage falling to the bottom of the shaft.

Bold Hold-Up.
Reading, Cal., Nov. 5.—A masked man armed with a pistol entered a saloon at Cottonwood and lined six men up with their faces to the walls and the hands over their heads, while he relieved them of $500 in cash and $1,800 in checks. Charles Emerson, one of the men who was held up, has been arrested on suspicion of complicity with the robber.

Two Trainmen Killed.
Roanoke, Va., Nov. 7.—A Norfolk and Western freight train, westbound from Roanoke, ran into a derailed engine switch near Radford and was wrecked. The engine turned over on Engineer E. R. Lynde of Roanoke and Fireman H. L. Klips of Blacksburg, killing both of them. The dead men leave families.

Busy Burglars.
Columbus, O., Nov. 7.—Eighteen residential robberies were reported to the police during the night. The operations were confined within a radius of less than three-fourths of a square mile. The police are convinced that the jobs were perpetrated by the lowest and most dangerous class of thieves.

$30.00 to Colorado and Return Via Chicago, Union Pacific & North-Western line. Chicago to Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo, daily throughout the summer. Corresponding low rates from all points east. One night to Denver from Chicago and Central States and only two nights enroute from the Atlantic seaboard. Two fast trains daily.

JOKER KILLED
When He Attempted to Hold Up a Friend at a Lonely Place.
Springfield, Ill., Nov. 6.—James M. Maxwell, president of local union No. 65, United Mine Workers of America, at Virden, was shot and killed by Thomas Hall, a bartender, as the result of a practical joke. Hall was returning home after closing the saloon, through North park, when Maxwell, for a joke, stepped from behind a tree and ordered Hall to throw up his hands. Hall, who had been a victim of hold-ups twice recently, drew a revolver and shot Maxwell in the stomach. Maxwell, who lived for several hours afterward, said he did not blame Hall for shooting him.

Fatal Wreck.
Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 5.—As a result of a wreck on a branch line of the Atlanta, Knoxville and Northern railroad near Ballground, Cherokee county, Ga., two men are dead and several others seriously injured. The dead: James P. Harrison, Ballground; A. C. Gaddis, Ballground. The known injured: Y. T. Thomas; H. L. Ingram; Peter Jordan, colored. Mr. Harrison is said to be well known in Atlanta, where for many years he was head of the James P. Harrison Printing company. Details of the accident are meager, but it seems that a marble train ran off a trestle into a pond. Whether the men were killed by drowning or otherwise is not known.

Liberal Victory.
Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 4.—The Dominion parliamentary elections were held Thursday. The returns point to the reelection of a Laurier government with a majority of between 50 and 70 in the house of commons, which is composed of 214 members. This is a Liberal gain of about 15. The Conservative leader, R. L. Borden, was defeated in his own constituency in Nova Scotia. The province of Quebec, Laurier's home, sustained the premier by returning a large Liberal majority.

Hunters Drowned.
Detroit, Mich., Nov. 3.—James H. Poote and Alfred Gaines, electricians, were drowned while duck hunting at the St. Clair flats. They, with Alex Lemple, were in shallow water when their boat began to leak and filled. They started to wade ashore, Lemple sticking to the boat and the other two setting out on a different course. All three were overcome by cold and exposure, but Lemple reached the shore before he fell unconscious.

Natural Gas Exploded.
Chicago, Nov. 3.—An explosion of natural gas in the tailor shop of Samuel Fisher caused the death of Fisher and injured five other people, none of them fatally. The explosion hurled Fisher through the side of his house and into the middle of the street. The building in which the tailor shop was located was badly damaged and a small cigar store adjoining was demolished.

More Leader Would Surrender.
Manilla, Nov. 4.—The Datto Ali, the Moro leader, who, on the pretext of resistance to the anti-slavery law, has been waging warfare with the American troops, has sent a message to Major General Wood, requesting an interview with a view to surrendering. General Wood has granted the request.

Hall, who had been a victim of hold-ups twice recently, drew a revolver and shot Maxwell in the stomach. Maxwell, who lived for several hours afterward, said he did not blame Hall for shooting him.

The cause of the disaster was the overflow of the reservoir, and a thorough investigation will be made in order to ascertain if the negligence of any of the employees at the pump station was responsible for it. The reservoir burst without warning, and the victims were drowned while asleep in their beds.

Father Killed in a Scuffle.
Detroit, Mich., Nov. 3.—Edward Howard, a patternmaker, was shot and killed by the elder man had his wife and daughter pinned to the floor by their throats. He had been drinking and had quarreled with Mrs. Howard because she would not give him more money. The shooting, it is claimed by the son and mother, was accidental. Mrs. Howard says her husband has been a heavy drinker for a number of years, and his habits caused them to leave their home in Manchester, England. Howard, Sr., lived but a few moments, the bullet having entered his loin. Young Howard is under arrest.

Claims of Political Managers.
New York, Nov. 3.—There was no extreme activity about political headquarters, but the managers were alert and watching the close of the campaign with great interest. The Democratic national committee issued a statement claiming with confidence the election of Judge Parker, and also making assertions about the campaign of the Republican party. Chairman Cortelyou, although shown a copy of the statement, would make no comment further than to repeat the claim made Saturday night that Mr. Roosevelt would have 314 votes in the electoral college. The Democrats claim 270 votes.

President Castro's Order.
Washington, Nov. 4.—Mr. Snyder, the United States charge at Bogota, cabled the state department that President Castro of Venezuela had issued an order again closing to navigation the river Zulia. This stream affords access to the interior of Colombia, and its closing before by President Castro almost involved Colombia and Venezuela in a war. The last action is taken to mean that the good understanding which was reached between Castro and Marroquin nearly a year ago, has not been preserved under the accession of General Reyes to the presidency of Colombia.

Crew Killed by Natives.
London, Nov. 4.—According to information from the island of Pemba, at the entrance to the Red sea, an investigation of Massira island made by the sultan of Muscat, shows that a boat's crew of 17 men, which left the British steamer "Baron Ingham," which ran ashore at the Kuria Kuria islands, reached Massira island and were massacred by the natives there. Nine of the murderers have been arrested. Previous information was that the boat had capsized and all its occupants drowned except one boy who was saved by the natives.

Town Gutted.
Macon, Ga., Nov. 3.—Tifton, Ga., suffered the most disastrous conflagration in the history of the city. The loss is estimated at approximately $250,000. There were no casualties. The burned district includes the following property: The Slack building, owned and occupied by S. G. Slack & Co., hardware; Dr. G. W. Julius, the second floor of which was occupied by the Green Manufacturing company; H. H. Heller lumber company, The Ensign Lumber company.
